

It's GO month, perfect for New Year's resolutions

Vicki Hancock, Get Organized Examiner

January 2nd, 2011 9:28 am ET

January is Get Organized Month, just in time for your New Year's resolutions.
Photo: apartmenttherapy.com

If one of your New Year's resolutions is to "get organized," your timing is perfect. The National Association of Professional Organizers (NAPO) has named January Get Organized (GO) month, and professional organizers all over America are ready to help you with that resolution.

You should consider hiring a professional organizer if you've tried to get organized and your efforts just haven't produced the results you wanted, or if you've tackled an organizing task or two and now have slipped back into your cluttered habits again.

At the NAPO web site, there is a list of useful questions to ask as you consider hiring an organizer, from types of services to fees. The site also includes consumer case studies, organizing tips, and a comprehensive directory to help you search for a professional organizer near your home or office whose specialties suit your needs.

If it's time to GO, NAPO has the resources to help.

Happy New Year!

Share your New Year's resolutions here, and click on "subscribe" to be notified of future Get Organized articles.

Related articles:

- Getting organized is habit-forming
- Define your clutter to get organized
- It's fun to get organized when you're stuck inside
- Organize your collections for maximum enjoyment
- Holiday DIY quick tips: make a plan to store your decor